

PDO THREADS PROCEDURE CONSENT FORM

PDO threads are a unique technique that stimulates collagen production in treated areas.

After treatment face and neck contour can instantly be generated with a much more youthful complexion by self-induced structure in deeper layer of skin. PDO threads give an instant and long lasting results.

Needling induce wound healing effect like:

Angiogenesis and fibroblast stimulation

Collagen induction improving skin tone and radiance also tightening pores by new tissue formation

Promotion of local blood microcirculation

Activation of reparative process

Threads can be used in number of areas of the face and neck.

The treatment requires small injections around the area to be treated

The administration of topical anaesthesia or local anesthesia maybe used if deemed necessary

The benefits with PDO threads will vary from patient to patient. The results are not guaranteed and will vary according to my own biological response

I have been informed and I understand that there are alternative treatments available for wrinkles and for face-lifts.

There are some risks related to PDO procedure, as with any aesthetic procedure. Complications of PDO threads are rare and usually self-limiting, but include the following:

Discomfort: Slight tightening sensation as new collagen is produced and around the threads. This may last for 2 weeks.

Bruising: Occasionally the needle may puncture a small blood vessel resulting in a bruise

Swelling and redness: This may result following the procedure due to injection with needle

Scarring: Scarring may result from multiple injections, but this is very unlikely

Allergic reactions: Although exceedingly rare, the possibility of an allergic reaction

Infection: Since Threads procedure involves injections; there is a theoretical risk of developing infection at the injection site. This is also exceedingly rare.

Discolouration: Transient or permanent skin pigmentation changes can sometimes occur at the injection sites

Affects of any local or topical anesthetic
